Not illustrated. 1898 Excerpt: . containing a single asymmetric carbon atom, three different modifications, two of which (one dextro-, the other levo-rotatory) are optically active and the third inactive. An example of such a compound is afforded by ethylidene lactic acid--CH, H CHj / I O = CH.OH HO NCOOH COOH of which one optically inactive form is known, and in chemical text-books is generally named fermentation lactic acid. The dextro-rotatory modification has also long been known to chemists under the name of sarco-lactic or para-lactic acid, whilst the third modification, levo-lactic acid, was only discovered and produced a few years ago by fermentation physiologists. This will be again referred to later on. 138.--The Isomeric Tartapic Acids. Of the compounds containing two asymmetric carbon atoms in the molecule we will refer to only that group in which these twoatoms are connected by a single bond, as is represented in the subjoined typical formula-- / As regards the positional arrangement of the two groups of substitutes (a, b, c, or a, (3, y) in the molecule, four possibilities are conceivable: (i) both grouped in the dextro-position; (2) both in the levo-position; (3) the one dextro-and the other levo-; (4) or, finally, vice versa. Assuming the group-- --to possess a (numerically) greater f optical rotatory power (D or L) than--C--/9, which may be 7 expressed in letters thus--D d L1, Then the rotatory power of the entire molecule will have the following values--D + d, L + l, D-rf, or L-l, according...
