Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Alkali and Water Logged Lands The object of this bulletin is to place before the public authoritative information regarding the practicability of reclaiming by means of sub-drainage, alkaline and waterlogged lands generally, and with specific reference to and urging the development of the major portion of an area of land approximating 50,000 acres lying between Salt Lake City and Great Salt Lake. This area of desert - and in many sections unsightly - waste is in excess of ten per cent of the total acreage of Salt Lake County, and is equal to forty per cent of its improved land in farms. The articles contained in this issue, which have been generously contributed by authorities, whose opinions are final in all matters pertaining to reclamation, should leave in the minds of even the most skeptical, no doubt whatever relative to the feasibility of successful reclamation of alkaline and water logged lands by means of drainage. There can be no question regarding the efficiency of drainage, but largely influencing its economic success is the factor of proper outlet for drainage waters. It therefore follows that in every district where a drainage system is contemplated, this primary element should be the subject of careful investigation. Topographical conditions under which successful drainage of the land west of this city must be accomplished, are such as to require much attention to this important feature. The altitude of the land with reference to the varying levels of Great Salt Lake (upon which depends the practical operation of a gravity drainage system) renders this consideration one of unusual importance.
